MONTANA

naturally inviting!

MONTANA is a word derived from the Latin meaning "mountainous." Admitted to the Union on November 8, 1889, it is the nation's fourth largest state, averaging 550 miles long and 275 miles wide. The eastern third is plains country; central third, plains and isolated mountain ranges; western third, mountains and mountain valleys. The Continental Divide runs north and south through the western section. The highest point is Granite Peak, 12,799 feet; the lowest is 1,820 feet on the Kootenai River at the Idaho line. Climate varies with topography and altitude. Average annual rainfall is 15 inches. Average daytime temperatures vary from 28 degrees in January to 84.5 in July.

MONTANA has a land area of more than 93 million acres, richly endowed with natural resources. In addition to millions of acres of range and cropland, other plentiful commodities utilized for the nation and the world are water, timber, coal, gold and silver, copper, oil and natural gas. Most of the state's power is hydroelectric, and there are six steam generating plants using coal as fuel.

MONTANA has 10 state parks, 18 state monuments, 71 state recreation areas, 215 fishing access sites, one recreation road and five recreation rivers.

MONTANA is home to seven North American Indian Tribes: the Assiniboine and Sioux, the Blackfeet, the Chippewa-Cree, the Confederated Salish and Kootenai, the Crow, the Assiniboine and Gros Ventre, and the Northern Cheyenne.

The symbols of the State of Montana, shown below, represent some of Montana's most beloved and familiar sights: Bitterroot Flower, Western Meadowlark, Ponderosa Pine, Agate and Sapphire gemstones, Bluebunch Wheatgrass, Blackspotted Cutthroat Trout, and the Grizzly Bear. The official seal of Montana was adopted on March 2, 1893, bearing the motto "Oro-Y-Plata," the Spanish words for gold and silver. The central part of the seal includes a plow and a miner's pick and shovel, with the Great Falls of the Missouri on the right and mountain scenery on the left.

MONTANA's tourism and hospitality industry hosts about four million visitors each year. Visitors and residents alike glory in year-round spectacular scenery, the still-vibrant spirit of the West, and unlimited outdoor recreation. Montana is naturally inviting—all year long.
